An information form on training offers participants a specific formation the opportunity to reflect on the effectiveness and relevance of training or instructor. Use the results of this form to alter training to adapt to the needs of attendees and better train the instructor to increase training efficiency. The feedback forms are a necessary and ostle part of the business processes, but the effectiveness of their feedback forms depends on the copy and form format. When creating so feedback forms, take into account these tips to ensure that you collect the best results most useful. reduce the time needed to complete the form. Don't do any compulsory field. make it as easy as possible to understand and complete. ask the right questions, and remember to beand limit the jargon. Limit the total number of questions. Ask questions you no longer know the answer. In case of doubt, don't ask the question. Include an open field to send additional suggestions or comments, and do not use pre-selected answers for each question. Create consistent rating scales, if applicable. Use the information you already know about the person who receives the form to customize the experience. Encourage customers to share how they want progress made. Add intrigue throughout the form.

Never forget: the customer is doing you a favor by completing this form, so include a thank you. Once you have received answers and collected the relevant information, it is time to analyze comments and create action elements to address the comments. The key to this process is to listen to users and respond to their concerns, both to gain annoying customers and improve the experience for existing or new users. Look for patterns in responses and transform those data into processing business decisions. Show users how your product helps them, launch more features that meet the needs expressed on the form and remove old functions that do not provide value. After completing these steps, show users what they have done by following regularly to demonstrate the influential changes in their business, product or process. This additional step will bring the full circle of the feedback process and show the user that cares about their concerns, frustrations and problems, which, in the long run, benefits your company.
